Political Editor, The Guardian

Pippa has covered Westminster and international politics for more than two decades, reporting on six general elections, seven prime ministers and too many major news stories to mention, from the Iraq war and the financial crash to Brexit and parliamentary scandals.

Pippa is a warm, witty and authoritative speaker who has long experience of chairing, presenting and speaking at events in the political world and beyond.

She has trusted contacts right at the heart of government, across Whitehall and in the main opposition parties so has a deep insight into what is going on in British politics and beyond.

Pippa is Political Editor of The Guardian, previously holding the same role at the Daily Mirror where she exposed the Partygate and Barnard Castle scandals. Before that she covered politics at the London Evening Standard.

A regular on broadcast media including Sky News, ITV, Channel 4 and the BBC, where she is a presenter of Radio 4's The Week In Westminster, she has also been portrayed in Michael Winterbottom's drama This England, a six-part drama about Boris Johnson and his government.

She is a multi-award winning journalist who is currently Journalist of the Year with the London Press Club, the Society of Editors and the British Journalism Awards. She has won accolades including political journalist of the year, scoop of the year, investigation of the year, the Hugh Cudlipp Award and Women In Journalism's woman of the year.

Born and brought up in Scotland, where she returns as often as she can, Pippa now lives in London with her husband and three young children.

“I was delighted that you were able to join our panel and share your views on the role our industry has to play in tackling the macro challenges facing Britain. Feedback from attendees has been exceptional and your participation clearly contributed significantly to what was a highly successful event.”

Association of British Insurers

“The feedback I heard was really positive and one delegate said that they loved that you weaved in the latest news in your keynote so it really was the most recent information you were including.”

Owen James

Ovid Health

“Pippa was an engaging and thought-provoking speaker at our annual conference. It was fascinating to hear her inside view on the biggest scoops of the last few years and listen to her speak passionately about the principles that drive her investigative journalism. She also never forgot her audience, relating her stories back to the experiences of those listening.”

FDA Union

“Roger provided lots of personality and kept the discussion moving well.”

Newcastle University

“We were delighted to have Pippa deliver a short talk during our Newcastle University alumni celebration evening. Pippa provided us with an excellent speech detailing her time at our university and how it’s influenced her career today. This was extremely well received by our guests and Pippa went the extra mile to mingle with other graduates throughout the evening. It was a pleasure to work together, I’d highly recommend Pippa for any future speaking opportunities.”

Global Water Intelligence

“Pippa’s session was definitely the busiest final session we have had in a while as delegates stayed to hear her so that was great.”
